COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE

THURSDAY EVENING, 21st FEB. 1878.

WE have received nothing in the shape of political news to-day to exercise any effect on business, but yesterday's commercial telegrams indicate a somewhat better feeling all round. Consols showed an advance of ¼ and French Rentes of ⅛ per cent, the closing quotations being 95⅞ and 110½ respectively. Wheat to arrive was quoted 6d. per quarter lower, and in Seeds we notice a decline of 6d. per quarter in Calcutta Linseed, both on the spot and to arrive, and 3d. per quarter in Calcutta Rapeseed to arrive.

PIECE Goods in Manchester were reported quiet, and Cotton in Liverpool, according to Reuter closed firm, the day's sales being estimated at 15,000 bales. Although, however, this indicates much more than an average business, spot quotations were unchanged, and private telegrams advise a decidedly dull feeling at the close. Arrivals certainly show that speculation was not active. F. G. F. Oomra February-March shipment via Canal finding sellers but no buyers at 5¼d per lb. delivered terms, or fully ⅛d per lb. less than the cost price here without commission. The market is evidently in a very hesitating position. Peace seems sufficiently probable to induce a certain amount of strength, while on the other hand the American receipts are on a scale which leaves little hope of any very important rise in prices.

Yesterday's telegrams from New York still quote ready Mid. Uplands at 10⅛ cents. per lb., but Futures are not given. The receipts at the American ports to date are as follows :—

	1878.	1877.	1876.
Wednesday's Receipts.....	15,000	12,000	19,000
Five days' "	74,000	60,000	78,000
Total since 1st Sept.....	3,431,000	3,465,000	3,369,000

The London General Produce Markets yesterday were without change, and in Reuter's weekly quotations for metals the only movement recorded was an advance of ¼d. per lb. in yellow metal.

At the weekly biddings for Council drafts on India in London yesterday the whole amount —£300,000—was allotted to Calcutta at 1s. 9d. per Rupee, which rate received in full, indicating pretty clearly that there was only one buyer. The general expectation here, as we mentioned yesterday, was that 1s. 8⅞d. to 15-16 would be about the average rate of allotment, but the advance is sufficiently explained by the turn which has taken place in the Silver market. The telegram published in our columns this morning gave a very fair idea of the actual state of things. A strong speculative demand has evidently set in on the metal, and when once a run of that kind sets in it is difficult to say where it may stop. Reuter quotes Bar Silver at 54½d., but some private messages we hear, give 55d., and it would, under the circumstances, be no matter for surprise if to-morrow brought us 55¼d. per oz., and the following day 56d. A strong speculative element, as we have said, has evidently got the lead at the moment, and without some idea of the strength at their command it is impossible to form even an approximate idea of how far the rise may be pushed. One very important feature, however, was pointed out in our telegram, viz, that the German Government have been selling freely at the rise, and should they continue to do so, the Oriental requirements may be put down as a matter of a week or two, perhaps only days. There can, we imagine, be little doubt that they still hold supplies sufficient to meet any real demand likely to arise for the metal, irrespective altogether of the increased production which may be anticipated from such a sudden and important advance in value.

Exchange on India, 60 days' sight, advanced in London yesterday to 1s. 9d., and Enfaced Rupee Paper rapidly showed the effect of the movement in Silver, Fours having risen from 81½ to 82½; Fours-and-a-half from 81½ to 83⅜, and Fives-and-a-half from 89½ to 90¾.

Following the movement on the part of the Directors of the Bank of Bombay yesterday afternoon, the Bank of Bengal in Calcutta have today further advanced their rates of discount one per cent all round. The pressure on the other side is doubtless considerable, but the rapidity with which the value of money has been enhanced of late can only have the effect of making a reaction proportionately quick in coming. There is no great pressure here, and directly there are any signs of ease in Calcutta we may expect to feel the effect of it.

STERLING EXCHANGE to-day has necessarily been in a very unsettled state. In the morning business opened at an advance of 1d., and transactions were done in 3 months' sight Credits at 1s 9 5-16d., but rates steadily hardened during the day, and at the close 1s. 9 7-16d. was the quoted figure. The rise has been so sudden, that people have had some difficulty in appreciating the position, and, as a general rule, sellers of Private Paper are holding off for the time being, and there will undoubtedly be a strong attempt made to avoid selling for a time, but the upward movement in Silver is evidently too strong to be resisted just yet, and we must lay our account for a further advance before a reaction sets in. The following are the closing quotations :—

Bank Bills, on demand	1s. 9 1-16d.	per Rupee.
Do. 6 months' sight..	1s. 9 7-16d.	"
Credits, 3 months' sight...	1s. 9⅜ to 7-16d.	"
Documents, 3 "	1s. 9 7-16 to ½d.	"
Sovereigns each	Rs. 11-8.

On Calcutta we have not heard of any business, and rates are nominally unaltered.

GOVERNMENT PAPER is firm with an upward tendency, although buyers are not numerous. We quote :—Fours, Rs. 94½ ; Fours-and-a-half, Rs. 94½ ; Fives-and-a-half, Rs. 102⅜ to 102½.

The SHARE MARKET has been quiet without, however, special change in values, except for Spinning and Weaving shares. In these a general decline of Rs. 10 to Rs. 15 has been established, the recovery in Exchange being decidedly in favour of lower values for Piece Goods and Yarns, while Cotton, on the other hand, does not give way in proportion.

COTTON.—As in most other things, we have had a very unsettled market to-day. There are buyers of ready Cotton to cover February shipments at yesterday's rates, but looking to the advance in Exchange there is no inclination to operate forward, and even at a reduction of Rs. 2 per candy from nominal quotations we question whether a large business could be done. Receipts are now on a more liberal scale, and were the G. I. P. Railway working better, we would see still larger arrivals. Before long this must have its effect, and we may look for Liverpool arrival quotations and our currencies and our prices being much closer together at an early date.

FREIGHTS are extremely dull. For Liverpool £1-12-6 is still the quotation by steamer, but the engagements making are few, and we hear that two other steamers, the European and Copia, have taken the berth. For Trieste and Venice the Ganges, s. s., is reported fixed at £2-2-6 payable here, for early March loading, and more tonnage is said to be available at the rate without finding charterers.

PIECE GOODS have been rather more dealt in to-day, the advance in Exchange having enabled sellers to accept lower rates, but the up-country demand is so small that it will probably be easily satisfied, and we may look for a recurrence of the previous dulness.

COALS are quiet but unchanged in value.

The Bombay Gazette

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1878.

THE diplomatic correspondence which we publish elsewhere brings up to the end of January the history of the negotiations between England and Russia as to the occupation of positions that would give to either of these Powers the command of the Bosphorus or the Dardanelles. It appears that, so far back as December 13, 1877,—that is to say, immediately after the fall of Plevna,—the English Government, taking alarm at the collapse of the Turkish resistance to Russia, and the probable facility of a Russian advance to Constantinople, thought it expedient to go beyond the terms of Lord Derby's despatch of the 6th of May last, defining the limits of England's conditional neutrality. In that despatch the Foreign Secretary had stated that England was "not prepared to witness with indifference the passing "of Constantinople into other hands than "those of its present possessors ;" and Prince Gortschakoff, in reply, had stated that, without being able to forecast the nature or issue of military operations, the Czar repeated his pledge that the acquisition of Constantinople was excluded from the scope of his policy, and that the fate of that city was a question of common interest which could only be disposed of by a general agreement of the European Powers. With this understanding the English Government remained satisfied till it became clear that Turkey was utterly prostrate before her enemy ; but then, on Dec. 13, Lord Derby sent a memorandum to Count Schouvaloff, the Russian Ambassador in London, stating that the assurances Prince Gortschakoff had given in May did not "sufficiently meet the dangers against "which the Queen's Government desire to "guard." "They are"—he went on to say—"strongly of opinion, an opinion which the "course of events tends still more to confirm, "that the occupation of Constantinople by the "Russian forces, even though it should be of "a temporary character and for military purposes "only, would be an event which it would, on all "accounts, be most desirable to avoid. They "cannot conceal from themselves that if such "an occupation appeared imminent, public "feeling in England, founded on a just appre"ciation of the consequences to be apprehended, "might call for measures of precaution from which "they have hitherto felt justified in abstaining." No one can deny, therefore, that Russia was fairly forewarned nearly two months ago of the tempest of indignation which would be excited in England by any attempt on the part of her army to occupy, even temporarily, the Turkish capital. Prince Gortschakoff was evidently taken aback by the receipt of this new and plainly-worded definition of English interests, so far as Constantinople was concerned ; and his reply betrays a marked reluctance to satisfy the requirements of the English Ministry. He reiterates the declaration of last May that "an acquisition of Constantinople is not now "comprised any more than before the war in "the intentions of His Majesty the Emperor," but "at the same time His Majesty considers that "it is his right and his duty to oblige Turkey "to conclude a solid and real peace. This end "must be attained. If the obstinacy or the "illusions of the Porte should oblige His Majesty to pursue his military operations, in "order to dictate a peace responding to the "openly-proclaimed object of the war, His "Imperial Majesty has always reserved to himself, and still continues to claim in regard to "this point, the full liberty of action which is the "right of every belligerent." There can be no possible doubt as to the meaning of this reservation. The Czar persisted in claiming for his army the right to occupy Constantinople for a time if the Turks, buoyed up either by their own obstinacy or by the hope of getting help from England, refused to confess themselves beaten and to accept the Russian terms of peace till their capital had fallen into the enemy's hands. Prince Gortschakoff put this view of the case still more clearly in a covering letter to his formal despatch, in which he entreated the British Government not to let its ultimatum be communicated to the Porte, as it would encourage the Turks "to prolong their resistance, in spite of "its evident uselessness, in such a way as to "force Russia to pursue her operations as far "as the capital." Now, although the Russian Chancellor evaded saying positively that there should be no temporary occupation of Constantinople, the language of these two documents evidently conveyed a distinct promise that, if England honestly tried to convince the Porte that no assistance could be expected from abroad, and the Turks consequently sued for peace, the Russian troops would not be allowed to continue their advance on Constantinople. The English Government faithfully performed its part of this understanding. It gave no encouragement to the Turks to prolong the war, but on the contrary urged them to come to terms with their conquerors. The Turks, accordingly, went down on their knees and craved the forgiveness of the Emperor of Russia, offering to sign any terms of peace His Majesty chose to dictate. But did Russia then keep faith with England, and fulfil her share of the compact between these Powers by checking the march of her troops at Adrianople ? On the contrary, she eagerly hurried them forward in order, apparently, to acquire the command of both the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles before the terms of peace she had imposed upon Turkey were revealed to Europe. The English people learnt almost simultaneously that the conditions of peace involved the destruction of the Turkish Empire in Europe, and that the Russian army was close to Constantinople and had obtained the right under the armistice of occupying the inland defences of that capital. Such underhand dealing was precisely of the kind that always raises the wrath of Englishmen more readily than direct antagonism would do ; and, as soon as the country found that the Russians were trying to outwit the English Government, it showed itself ready not merely to make preparations for war but to go to war at once unless Russia gave way.

If the understanding as regards Constantinople was clearly enough expressed for all honourable men, that which had reference to Gallipoli was still more explicit. In his reply to Lord Derby's despatch of the 13th of December, Prince Gortschakoff, with the intention possibly of avoiding further discussion about Constantinople, asked with an air of guileless simplicity which is quite touching if the Foreign Secretary would "have the goodness to define more clearly what were the "British interests which he considered might be "touched by the eventualities of the war within "the limits to which the assurances of the "Imperial Cabinet had restricted them." Lord Derby thereupon bluntly stated, in a despatch, dated January 12, that Her Majesty's Government were of opinion that "any operations tending to place "the passage of the Dardanelles under the "control of Russia would be an impediment to "the proper consideration of the terms of the "final settlement between Russia and Turkey ; "and he therefore asked Prince Gortschakoff to "give an assurance that no Russian force should "be sent to the Peninsula of Gallipoli." This assurance was at once given, the Russian Chancellor declaring positively that no military operations should be directed against Gallipoli unless the Turkish regular troops concentrated there, and expressing in his turn a hope that the English Government did not contemplate occupying the place. Lord Derby replied, "No, not under present circumstances ;" and England made no effort to secure the command of the Dardanelles till she had reason to complain of a Russian breach of faith as regards the advance on Constantinople. The Russians seem to have quite content to leave Gallipoli alone, for they moved no troops against the place even when some Turkish regulars arrived to occupy it ; and on January 30, in the last of the published despatches, Prince Gortschakoff even offered to leave out of the conditions of peace the Article relating to "an ulterior understanding between Turkey and Russia" with regard to the whole question of the control of the Straits, an offer which Lord Derby promptly accepted. The advance to Constantinople, however, showed that this offer was quite illusory ; and the British counter-stroke of despatching the Mediterranean Squadron through the Dardanelles to watch over both Constantinople and Gallipoli may have led the Russians, mortified at being compelled to evacuate the capital, to raise anew the question of occupying Gallipoli so long as British Ironclads are anchored in the Dardanelles. Any difficulty of this kind will, however, be easily arranged now that Russia has shown she does not mean fighting. The really serious matter will be to determine at the Conference how the free passage of the Dardanelles and Bosphorus shall henceforth be safe-guarded. It is clear that Turkey is too weak to keep the command of the Straits ; and, if England is willing to let the ships of war of all nations pass through these narrow waters from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean and vice versâ, she must take care that there is some guardian appointed to keep the passage free. The best security for the attainment of this end would be the occupation of Gallipoli by a British garrison ; and no doubt Austria and perhaps also France and Italy would gladly acquiesce in such an arrangement, leaving England to carry it out by purchasing Gallipoli from the Turks. Without such a guarantee for the freedom of the waterway, the Dardanelles would soon pass under the control of Russia.

In an article published by us a few days ago, we mentioned that the most eligible Papabili were, according to Signor Bonghi, in his recent publication, "Pope Pius IX. and the Pope of the Future," Cardinal Pecchi, Cardinal Bilio, Cardinal Monacho la Valletta, Cardinal Simeoni and Cardinal Franchi. Reuter's telegram this morning about the election of a new Pope will show that Signor Bonghi has made a singularly shrewd prophecy, for Cardinal Pecchi, the first of the eligible Papabili he named, has been elected with the impressive ceremony of adoration performed by his brother Cardinals. Of course Pope Leo XIII., as the new Pope has decided to be named, is an Italian. From the beginning it was believed that no foreigner whatever would have a chance of wearing the Triple Crown. Pope Leo's policy is described as "moderate," but few people will be able to extract any practical meaning from the phrase.

The petition to Parliament against the Licence Tax has now been signed. we hear, by the representatives of every mercantile firm in Bombay, Mr. Donald Graham leading for Messrs. W. and A. Graham & Co., and Mr. Hamilton Maxwell following for Messrs. W. Nicol and Co. The petition lies for signature at Mr. Kemp's, Elphinstone Circle.

Mr. Andrew Grant, late of Bombay, has been returned to Parliament as member for Leith, and we hope care will be taken to send him a copy of the proceedings at the meeting against the Licence Tax, and to ask him to support the petition. Few members of the House of Commons are better able to express themselves than Andrew Grant is, and from our remembrance of his independent character we should say that he will be revolted at the thought of the iniquitous taxation the Government of India proposes to levy on Indian traders.

The Indian Daily News—Lord Lytton likens the business of a Finance Minister in times like these to that of a dentist,—a business which is very useful, but is not to be carried on without giving pain. Apropos of these remarks, we may note that Sir John Strachey's manner is very unsuited for the part of such an operation. He is for ever flourishing his instrument in the face of the patient, talking about his own skill in taking out teeth, asking not merely for his fee, but also for an eloquent tribute of admiration. The whole of India and England should, he almost tells us, thank Sir John Strachey for the wonderful budget he has made. As for those critics who carp at him they are very ignorant or very wicked. "I will say that our new taxation will fall upon the poor," he declares, "is either an error or a calumny." Considering the very second rate expedients for new taxation he has invented, to wit, the old Mogul plan of increasing the land revenue by a special cess, the discarded licence tax, and the abandoned and most objectionable resource of an increase in the salt tax, he should be more modest. And it does not seem to us that a bad budget, supported by a weak speech, is any sufficient cause for self-complacency.

The Pioneer—Nothing gives such a clear idea of the scarcity of fodder in the North-West Provinces than seeing all the commoner trees far and wide stripped of their leaves and bare as if from a hailstorm. The peepul and the babul have been cleared of every leaf, and in many instances mangoes have not escaped. Every conceivable thing that can be utilised as fodder is brought into market,—even the dead leaves of the frost-bitten arbar, and the cultivator carefully thins his field of all the plants likely to be unproductive of grain, even if he stays his hand at these. Grass is at famine prices, a miserable handful fetching two annas, and at Makanpur Horse Fair a bundle ordinarily obtainable for the same sum, could not be purchased under eight annas.

The Madras Government report on the districts of Ganjam and Vizagapatam that there is at present no cause for special anxiety, but that their prospects appear uncertain. Both districts are being carefully watched.

Fresh orders have been issued by the Madras Government to insure the greatest care being taken in stopping relief, and to enforce proper control and frequent supervision by European officers in certain cases where it is doubtful if that has been as thoroughly carried out as is desirable.

From North Arcot it is reported that the improvement in the state of the people is distinct though gradual, but likely to continue much the same until the price of grain falls.

Surgeon-General Van Someren reports on the Chingleput Relief Camp that the total admissions have amounted to about 10,000, but there have never been more than 2,000 inmates at any one time. On the 23rd January there were only 258 in camp, and of them 50 under treatment in hospital. The number treated in hospital since May 1877 was 1,688, among whom 347 deaths occurred, showing a mortality of 25·5 per cent. Thirty-nine deaths took place out of hospital, bringing the total up to 386 among about 10,000 admissions into the relief camp, which gives a mortality rate of 3·86 per cent. He states that a large expanse of the district looks green with promising crops, but still large tracts of arable land are uncultivated even where water seems abundant.

The gold mines in Wynaad appear to have turned out lately an average of 3 dwts of gold per ton; though larger returns than 7 dwts have been obtained at times by, without regularity. It is considered that 3 dwts per ton should be sufficient to make the works pay while the cost of working is small and water-power employed. The companies are at present working nearly at the surface, where native workers have been before them, and the machinery is inefficient and poor. The question is whether the richness of the "underlie" is sufficient to cover the expenses of working by skilled hands valuable and expensive machinery for deeper mining.

The Indian Charivari says:—Sir Richard Temple has, we read in the Bombay papers, been directing attention to the fact that the Bombay Mills do not consume their own smoke as required by the Municipal Act. He should look at home, touching the consumption of much more nauseous vapours. How would Sir Richard fare if he were compelled to consume his own gas! The community would benefit by the arrangement anyhow, for the escape is occasionally awfully offensive.

It has been generally assumed that Egypt was in no way threatened by Russian ambition. But Lord Beaconsfield in his remarks on the resignation of Lord Carnarvon said:—"There are other points in that despatch defining the limits of England's conditional neutrality. There was an important reference to Egypt. In respect of that it has been said, that we referred to points which could hardly enter into controversy. If the persons who make those comments had the experience which we have had as to Egypt during the last year, they would be aware that bold, perilous, and unprincipled measures have been suggested in respect of that country."

Mr. Freeman, in a letter to the Times, claims Constantinople for the Greeks:—"In justice and in policy the Turk must go from Constantinople, as from every other corner of his ill gotten dominion; and we, if we may not help, at least we must not hinder. And who shall succeed him? I have been delighted to see the claims of Greece set forth in not a few speeches in England, conspicuously by Mr. Forster, and in the noble speech of Mr. Chamberlain, in Birmingham. Your reporter, a few days back, in analyzing a letter of mine which was read at Willis's Rooms, made me argue in favour of a 'restoration of the Byzantine Empire in some shape.' I never wrote or thought any such nonsense. The Byzantine Empire was before all things the negation of all nationality; and, as owing a temporary allegiance to King Humbert of Italy, I certainly do not propose a measure which might disturb him in the possession of a large part of his kingdom. I plead, not for an unnational, anti-national, Byzantine Empire, but for justice to Greek nationality, for an extension of the existing Greek State, whether under the name of kingdom or empire matters little. Let all have their own. Let the Slav have his own inland dominion, his own Adriatic and Euxine coasts. But the Greek is the natural owner of those coasts and islands and peninsulas on either side of the Ægean, which had been his since Europe became Europe. Here is the real 'solution of the Eastern question,' not in keeping in the intruder, but in driving out the intruder and in bringing back the lawful inhabitants."

The Globe says:—The attempt of the Times to gloss over and represent as of such small importance the news from its Calcutta correspondent, which it publishes, is, unfortunately, too obviously vain. We may accept the latest news from the North-West Frontier as a satisfactory sedative to the alarm naturally aroused by earlier intelligence, but we have no such re-assuring antidote in regard to the attitude of Afghanistan. It is so far gratifying to learn that the hostile demonstration of the Afreedees, marching to join the Jowakis and firing on a British cavalry escort, does not necessarily mean an alliance between these troublesome neighbours. The latest news is to the effect that the Afreedees have been very indignant with the Jowakis, and have put pressure on them to sue for peace. Of a very different complexion is the announcement that the Ameer of Cabul is massing troops at Candahar. It may be that the ill-feeling excited against Persia in consequence of the award of the arbitrators, by which that Power has obtained the province of Seistan, has determined the Ameer to threaten the Persian Power; but it is quite as likely that the movement is meant to menace England. If there is ill feeling towards the Shah's Government there is no good feeling towards the Empress of India, and the Ameer is frank enough to make no attempt to cloak his hostile feelings to England. What gives its most alarming significance to his attitude is the fact—of which there is no doubt—of Russian intrigues in Afghanistan. Russian envoys are represented (the Times Calcutta correspondent says) as constantly passing to and from Cabul, and as being treated with much consideration there. We may be confident that in the event of serious troubles the Indian Government would be well able to hold its own against the Ameer, and even to conquer and occupy his territory. But that means a complete revolution in the military situation which as it has hitherto been considered. Afghanistan, instead of being a barrier against possible Russian attack, has to all intents and purposes become a Russian outwork, bringing the Muscovite military power into immediate contact with the British. Russian intrigue has won its first victories, and will, no doubt, be followed up sedulously and ceaselessly.

The Turkish feeling against England is intensely bitter. The semi-official Turquie publishes lately an article headed 'Deception,' casting the whole of the responsibility for the misfortunes overwhelming the Ottoman Empire on England alone, and declaring that Turkey ought to have made peace immediately after the fall of Plevna, and would have done so if the Sultan and Viziers had not been encouraged by foreign influences too well known to all the world to need naming—the Turks would in that case have got honourably out of the war, and the Russians would not be in Adrianople; that the nomination of an English Ambassador of Mr. Layard's well-known sympathies was the origin of Turkish misfortunes. This attack on England is all the more remarkable as the Press has received the strictest official orders to write not one word in disparagement of Russia. In private conversations still stronger language is held about the British Ambassador for the hopes he is believed to have held out almost up to the last moment of English aid, though some say it is not fair to condemn him until it is known what instructions he received from the English Cabinet, or at least from the head of the Cabinet.

The Golos publishes an important article upon the financial position in which Russia will find herself placed at the close of the war, and it advises the adoption of the following measures:—Reduction, instead of increase, of the expenditure for the Army; the suspension for some years of the payment from abroad and of guaranteeing the interest on railway loans; the imposition of fresh taxes, including an income-tax and an additional percentage upon railway traffic; a gradual withdrawal in practical and not fictitious proportions of paper money from circulation; an increase of the stock of bullion by means of loans corresponding with the increase of revenue or diminution of expenditure. The article proceeds to advocate a partial disarmament, and says that even if this course should not be decided upon at a conference for the whole of Europe, Russia might adopt it with impunity in view of her admirable veteran Army, which has been inured to war by the present difficult campaign.

In a suit for divorce by the Earl of Aylesford on the ground of the adultery of the Countess with the co-respondent, the Marquis of Blandford, while the petitioner was absent with the Prince of Wales in India, Mr. Bayford has moved, on behalf of the petitioner, that the matter be heard before the Court itself. Mr. Walter Ballantine, for the respondent, has consented, and the President made the order for trial as prayed.

Both University crews have begun practice for the annual race. On Jan. 30 the Cambridge crew went out, coached by Mr. Gurdon, and rowed to Baitsbite and back. The weather was very favourable, and there were a good many people on the banks. Several of the men took preliminary tub exercise with Messrs. Gurdon and Hockin. It is said Mr. James Close is coming up to coach later on. The president of the Oxford Boat Club also commenced practice in earnest on the 30th, having taken three pairs out in rubbing and coached the following crew from the stern of the boat:—Bow, Dunn, Baxendene, Bailey, Grenfell, Burgess, Borth, Pelham, Southwell, and Ellison, University.

Mr. Bright, in his speech on the vote of credit, complimented the Government on not having been involved "in what I may call the raving lunacy of the Pall Mall Gazette (laughter), and if I may be excused the alliteration, the delirium tremens of the Daily Telegraph. (Renewed laughter.)"

The World says:—The persistence in asking for the supplementary vote is not so much because Lord Beaconsfield will act so, as by reason of representations from the Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, who is under the apprehension that, if something is not done, in a few months there will not be a full-grown man in the home service of the British army. That this apprehension is not wholly groundless will be admitted by any one who witnessed the embarkation of the 24th the other day at Southampton. It is not on my own responsibility that I venture on the comment, but on the testimony of experienced and discerning members of the Army Medical Department, that a more miserable, limp, half-grown shambling batch of raw boys never left England under Her Majesty's uniform, even in the worst crisis of the Crimean War. While this spectacle was being witnessed at Southampton, Netley Hospital, within sight of the big transport, contained several hundred 'time-expired' men in the prime of life, seasoned by six years' service at home and abroad, who, spite of willingness to remain in the army, are being forced out of it into the reserve, just at the age when they are best qualified for active field-service.

The official roll of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in the present session of Parliament contains exactly 500 names. At the head of the list are the Prince of Wales, the Royal dukes (including the Duke of Cumberland, ex-King of Hanover), the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of Adelphi, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon (as Lord President of the Council), and the Earl of Beaconsfield (as Lord Privy Seal). Then comes a list of dukes, in which the Duke of Norfolk ranks first and the Duke of Westminster last. Among marquises, the Marquis of Hertford comes first, as Lord Chamberlain, the Marquis of Winchester follows, and the Marquis of Abergavenny comes last. As Lord Seaward Earl Beauchamp heads the list of earls, the next being the Earl of Shrewsbury, and the last the Earl of Redesdale. Among the viscounts, Lord Hereford is first and Lord Cardwell last. The Bishop of London heads the list of bishops and the Bishop of Ely comes last. Lord de Ros is first among the barons, and the last name in the roll is that of Lord Airey.

A petition has been presented to Parliament signed by Miss Lydia Becker, Rosanna Battey, Sarah Maria Backhouse, and other ladies. It sets forth that marriage is the natural and honourable profession in which the majority of women maintain themselves by the discharge of the conjugal, social, and domestic duties which appertain to the position of a wife; that the entrance on this profession comes to a woman through an offer or promise of marriage; that the acceptance of such offer or promise debars the woman from forming other ties, and the breaking or non-performance of such promise hinders her from obtaining an establishment in life, inasmuch as a woman who has given her promise and affections to one man cannot transfer them to another without grievous loss; that men do not usually marry for a maintenance, while marriage is regarded as the proper and usual means through which women obtain a maintenance; therefore a breach of promise of marriage by a man to a woman causes a pecuniary loss which is not usually suffered through a breach of promise by a woman to a man; and upon these and other grounds the petitioners pray that leave may not be granted to bring in a Bill to abolish actions for breach of promise of marriage.

In a speech delivered at Oxford on Jan. 30, Mr. Gladstone spoke as if the sole object of his life now is to thwart Lord Beaconsfield. Quoting an old joke of Lord Brougham's about the Duke of Wellington's Government of 10 members, that the Duke was the unit and the other nine members made up the nought, Mr. Gladstone applied it to Lord Beaconsfield as the real inspirer of the Government policy. "It is the persistent, never-failing will, always watching the opportunity and working at the Foreign Office through a man in many respects to be greatly regarded by the country, but not of the strong purpose, not of the determined character of Lord Beaconsfield—it is Lord Beaconsfield's will that takes effect, fitfully and with fluctuations, in the policy of the Government, and that from time to time succeeds in bringing the country into danger. To my own great pain, and with infinite reluctance, but under the full and strong convictions, I may say, of my political old age, for the last 18 months I may be said to have played the part of an agitator. Lord Beaconsfield says that the happiness of life is neither to make speeches nor write letters. I admire the wit and I do not complain of the hit. It is a very fair one; but I must point out that that is all very well for the Prime Minister, who has got a Cabinet, and departments, and secretaries, and Ambassadors, and a majority in the House of Lords, and a majority in the House of Commons. These are the means through which his will can take effect. But I have none of these things. My purpose, I will tell you fairly, has been with extremely inadequate means, and in a very mean and poor degree, but still to the best of my power for the last 18 months, day and night, week by week, month by month, to counterwork as well as I could what I believe to be the purpose of Lord Beaconsfield. Speeches and letters are, I admit, very poor affairs. They are open to criticism of all kinds, and they get plenty of it. But if anybody will provide any more efficient instruments, I will use them; and until I am supplied with better, I will, God helping me, continue to use those which I have got." The Times candidly admits, with reference to this speech, that Mr. Gladstone's personal opposition to the Premier "has done something both to sour him and to distort his judgment of facts."

A pamphlet just published at Munich under the title of "Count Andrassy before the Delegations," among other things gives an interesting and authentic account of a conversation Signor Crispi, the President of the Italian Legislative Assembly, had with Prince Bismarck this summer at Gastein. Adverting to the fate of Austria, Germany's principal concern in the Oriental Question, the Prince is represented as having expressed himself in this wise:—

"Things are no longer as they were in 1866. In those days Prussia for self-preservation sake, was compelled to league against Austria with forefathers. Had Napoleon III. been accessible to bribes, Austria would have done as much to have the question of German supremacy decided in her favour. Count Beust, the Saxon Premier, did not hesitate to apply to the French Sovereign for help, and would have gone any length to secure the coveted assistance. But another Russian Sovereign stood then. Prussia and Austria having settled their little feud, the former, even were her Cabinet ever so hostile to Austria, was no longer in a position to join with the foreigner; for the purpose of combating Austrian influence, Germany had absorbed the idea of entering into a foreign alliance against a State including eight millions of Germans. Only in the improbable case that the Jesuit and Revenge parties were to take the lead at Vienna, aiming at the dissolution of the German Empire and the supremacy of the Pope over the country of Luther, would the Germans deem themselves justified in having recourse to extreme measures. No doubt there were certain influential people in Austria eager to bring about such a conflict; but they were hardly powerful enough to induce such a display, and even were it to be done they would be defeated by the Germans in Austria declaring and foiling their pernicious policy. The friendship and alliance existing between Germany and Austrian Empires was founded upon a community of interests and was sure to survive after the reigning Sovereigns had been gathered to their fathers. Sovereigns were easily led astray by women, parsons, and priests; but if two nations were determined to remain friends, it was difficult to alienate them by flimsy intrigues. As a friend and well-wisher of Italy, he (Bismarck) could not but advise the Italians to abandon the idea of acquiring Southern Tyrol from Austria. He had no wish to encourage the Italians to fall out with any of their neighbours, but he thought that it would be easier for them to obtain the restoration of Savoy than to annex any of the mixed districts on the south-western frontier of the Austrian Empire. He did not care overmuch for what was occurring at Plevna, and if the follies of Marshal MacMahon moved him at all it was only because he saw the hand of the Vatican behind the scenes."

THE TELEPHONE.

We hear that Prof. Bell's telephone is to be exhibited by Mr. K. D. Naegamvala, M. A., Senior Fellow, Elphinstone College, at the ensuing meeting of the Elphinstone College Union, which comes on about the middle of March.

CYCLONE AT THE MAURITIUS.

The following is the report of Captain Harwood, of the ship Shah Jehan, from Mauritius to Bombay, which put into Galle for repairs:—"On the 14th January in latitude 18° 57' S. and longitude 57° 20' E. experienced a cyclone, wind beginning E.N.E., veering N., and ending S. W.; bad weather lasted 36 hours. Barometer 29·50 lowest. Had to cut away foremast to lighten the vessel, being partly filled with water at the time, the main mast went by the deck carrying away the mizzen and washing two cutters, carrying away the mizzen top mast which fell on the poop, smashing binnacle, wheel, skylight, and gig, &c. Ship a complete wreck and apparently filling with water. At 4 a.m. on Wednesday morning barometer 29·60, sea going down. Ship drifting towards Mauritius. Sighted the land on Thursday afternoon at 3 p.m. Lost one man overboard. The whole of the cargo has been landed and a part sold by public auction." A Mauritius paper says: "On the 15th January there were evident symptoms of a cyclone in our neighbourhood, and the island suffered in a small degree from frequent and strong squalls. These necessarily did some damage to the more advanced canes for next crop, but not to a serious extent. Happily, the cyclone curved to the westward of the island, expending a part of its force, unfortunately, on Reunion, where the damage to the coffee and vanilla plantations was considerable, the canes suffering but little. The ship Canadienne became a total loss on the Reunion reefs, and several of the local shipping were either wrecked or sustained irreparable damage. We regret also to record that 13 out of the 19 crew of the Canadienne perished, as did also a certain number of the inhabitants of the sister-island through the overturn of houses and the upsetting of boats."

REPORTS REGARDING MERITORIOUS SERVICES RENDERED DURING THE FAMINE PERIOD.

Extract from the Proceedings of Government in the Public Works Department, (Famine Branch,) dated 19th February 1878.

Resolution.—His Excellency the Governor in Council has perused these reports with much satisfaction.

2. On several occasions throughout the famine period His Excellency in Council had the gratification of noticing how efficiently and energetically the local authorities in all departments were performing the difficult and responsible duties that devolved upon them, and he did not fail to observe the efforts and precautions which were being taken by all concerned, on the one hand, to prevent waste and imposition, and, on the other hand, to protect the people from the calamity that had befallen them.

3. These efforts and exertions, rendered so ably and zealously, have been, under Providence, followed with success on the whole—despite failures, shortcomings, and disappointments; and His Excellency the Governor in Council now desires to express the best thanks of the Government to all, non-official as well as official, who took any active part in the means adopted for the alleviation of distress during the years 1876 and 1877, and more particularly to those whose names are here set forth:—

EUROPEAN AND OTHER EXTRACTS

which has been progressing throughout this century. Servia, Roumania, and Montenegro assume at length the independent position won by Greece fifty years ago; and Bulgaria steps into the position till lately held by Russia. The Porte will still remain in possession of one of the finest Empires in the world, and, if it introduces reasonably good government into its Asiatic Provinces, may be more prosperous than ever before. The bravery of the Turks, supported by the interests of Europe, will have won for them another opportunity to revive the decaying vigour of the greater portion of their old Empire; and they may, perhaps, be in all the better position when relieved of responsibility for Provinces in which they must always have had to deal with a hostile population.

(Pall Mall Gazette, Jan. 26.)

If one only of the conditions have been correctly stated and be carried into effect, there is an end of the Turkish Empire. This, and nothing less than this, is meant by the "autonomy of Bulgaria under a Christian ruler," assuming that the province so named is really to include a portion of the territory south of the Balkans inhabited by Bulgarians." To allow this is simply to place the enemy of Turkey within the last of her national defences, and to limit the sovereignty of the Porte to the city of Constantinople and the Asiatic dominions of the Empire. Nay, the terms of peace go further than this—that is, if they include, as they are said to include, a cession to Russia of Batoum, Kars, and Erzeroum, with the adjacent territory. If this be carried out, Turkey is paralysed in Asia as effectually as in Europe. With two such conditions of peace before us as this, we had better not be in a hurry to congratulate ourselves on the moderation of Russia; and we need not look further than these two conditions for the present. It is not worth while to discuss the question, dismissed with such supreme indifference by the Times this morning as the "only one remaining," the question of the war indemnity to be given to Russia, and which, it is carelessly added, "is to be either in money or in territory, as may be determined after further discussion between Russia and Turkey." Nor need we speculate upon the probable import of the statement that the question of the Dardanelles is reserved for the consideration of Europe. Whatever be done about the Straits, or if nothing be done about them, Russia will, if she obtain acceptance of the other conditions have amply fulfilled the object with which she went to war. There will be an end not only of Turkish Bulgaria but of Turkish Roumelia and an end of Turkish Armenia. Each of these provinces will become a new Servia—that is, a new Russian outpost—and between the former of these and the Turkish capital the country will be completely open and defenceless. The Sultan must necessarily become a vassal of the Czar, and all the dangers with which that relation threatens this country will fairly confront us.

The following is a statement of the bases of peace, communicated to the Government of Count Schouvaloff on January 25, 1878, and read out to the House of Commons on Monday by the Chancellor of the Exchequer:—

1. Bulgaria, within the limits of Bulgarian nationality not less than those of the Conference, to be an autonomous tributary principality, with a national Christian Government, a native militia, and no Turkish troops, except at some points to be determined hereafter.

2. The independence of Montenegro, with an increase of territory equivalent to the military status quo frontier to be decided hereafter.

3. Independence of Roumania, with sufficient territorial indemnity.

4. Independence of Servia, with rectifications of the frontier.

5. Autonomous administration to be sufficiently guaranteed to Bosnia and Herzegovina.

6. Similar reforms for the other Christian provinces.

7. Indemnity to Russia for the expenses of the war in a pecuniary, territorial, or other form, to be decided hereafter.

8. Ulterior understanding for safeguarding the rights and interests of Russia in the Straits.

BOURNE AND SHEPHERD,

(Near the Esplanade Hotel,)
ALSO AT
CALCUTTA AND SIMLA.
STUDIO FOR PORTRAITURE OPEN DAILY
FROM 9 A.M. TILL 4 P.M.
INDIAN SCENERY.

Messrs. BOURNE and SHEPHERD'S collection of Photographs of Indian Scenery is the LARGEST and BEST which has been progressing throughout this century. Servia, Roumania, and Montenegro assume at length the independent position won by Greece fifty years ago; and Bulgaria steps into the position till lately held by Servia. The Porte will still remain in possession of one of the finest Empires in the world, and, if it introduces reasonably good government into its Asiatic Provinces, may be more prosperous than ever before. The bravery of the Turks, supported by the interests of Europe, will have won for them another opportunity to revive the decaying vigour of the greater portion of their old Empire; and they may, perhaps, be in all the better position when relieved of responsibility for Provinces in which they must always have had to deal with a hostile population.

(Pall Mall Gazette, Jan. 26.)

If one only of the conditions have been correctly stated,and be carried into effect, there is an end of the Turkish Empire. This, and nothing less than this, is meant by the "autonomy of Bulgaria under a Christian ruler," assuming that the province so named is really "to include a portion of the territory south of the Balkans inhabited by Bulgarians." To allow this is simply to place the enemy of Turkey within the last of her national defences, and to limit the sovereignty of the Porte to the city of Constantinople and the Asiatic dominions of the Empire. Nay, the terms of peace go further than this—that is, if they include, as they are said to include, a cession to Russia of Batoum, Kars, and Erzeroum, with the adjacent territory. If this be carried out, Turkey is paralysed in Asia as effectually as in Europe. With two such conditions of peace before us as this, we had better not be in a hurry to congratulate ourselves on the moderation of Russia; and we need not look further than these two conditions for the present. It is not worth while to discuss the question, dismissed with such supreme indifference by the Times this morning as the "only one remaining," the question of the war indemnity to be given to Russia, and which, it is carelessly added, "is to be either in money or in territory, as may be determined after further discussion between Russia and Turkey." Nor need we speculate upon the probable import of the statement that the question of the Dardanelles is reserved for the consideration of Europe. Whatever be done about the Straits, or if nothing be done about them, Russia will, if she obtain acceptance of the other conditions have amply fulfilled the object with which she went to war. There will be an end not only of Turkish Bulgaria but of Turkish Roumelia and an end of Turkish Armenia. Each of these provinces will become a new Servia—that is, a new Russian outpost—and between the former of these and the Turkish capital the country will be completely open and defenceless. The Sultan must necessarily become a vassal of the Czar, and all the dangers with which that relation threatens this country will fairly confront us.

The following is a statement of the bases of peace, communicated to the Government of Count Schouvaloff on January 25, 1878, and read out to the House of Commons on Monday by the Chancellor of the Exchequer:—

1. Bulgaria, within the limits of Bulgarian nationality not less than those of the Conference, to be an autonomous tributary principality, with a national Christian Government, a native militia, and no Turkish troops, except at some points to be determined hereafter.

2. The independence of Montenegro, with an increase of territory equivalent to the military status quo; frontier to be decided hereafter.

3. Independence of Roumania, with sufficient territorial indemnity.

4. Independence of Servia, with rectifications of the frontier.

5. Autonomous administration to be sufficiently guaranteed to Bosnia and Herzegovina.

6. Similar reforms for the other Christian provinces.

7. Indemnity to Russia for the expenses of the war in a pecuniary, territorial, or other form, to be decided hereafter.

8. Ulterior understanding for safeguarding the rights and interests of Russia in the Straits.

THE INDIAN PIANETTE, WITH SOLID ENTIRE IRON FRAME.

SOUNDY & Co.'s many years' experience in India has given them exceptional opportunities of seeing Pianofortes from all parts of the country that will not withstand the effects of this trying climate. They have therefore devoted considerable time and expense to the matter of constructing a thoroughly good and inexpensive Pianoforte that will be really serviceable, and have happily succeeded, after much trouble, in attaining this.

It is difficult to convey in an advertisement even an approximate idea of the qualities of the "INDIAN PIANETTE." SOUNDY & Co. would, therefore, invite intending purchasers of a Piano to see and judge for themselves. The instrument is made of SOLID CANADIAN WALNUT with black mouldings in relief; it has an entire iron frame, which render the strings quite independent of any wood bracings, which are not used in this Piano. THE PIN PLANK is firmly encased in the iron frame and securely bolted, so that it cannot possibly be affected by extremes of climate. THE SOUNDING BOARD is made of the very best seasoned wood and the bars are screwed upon quite a new principle. THE ACTION is of the very best construction and is DOUBLE CHECK, which gives a most delicate touch with great precision. The instrument has a TRICHORD TREBLE, which gives VOLUME and BRILLIANCY equal to a grand Piano, and the tone throughout is of a beautiful singing quality which renders it peculiarly adapted for brilliant pieces as well as an accompaniment to the voice. It has a FULL GRAND COMPASS OF 7 OCTAVES, so that the most modern and difficult works can be performed on the instrument.

The variations of climate, causing equal contraction and expansion of iron frame and strings together, the INDIAN PIANETTE, from its peculiar construction, will stand longer in tune than Pianos made upon any other system.

The greatest care has been taken to secure the instrument against the effects of insects and vermin, and although the case is of solid wood and substantial make, it is an exceedingly handsome Piano, whilst the compactness of the instrument renders it peculiarly adapted for transport to the mofussil.

The Price Rs. 450, places the INDIAN PIANETTE within the reach of all.
